Trend Update

It is the beginning of a new year and undoubtedly new home trends will follow. Will the hot trends of 2008 fall by the wayside? Don't be so sure. Many trends have cropped up over the past few years that apparently came to stay. A brief recap of 2008 trends should of course include color, accents and shapes. Brown became the new black and the new neutral. Peacock (formally known as turquoise) was all the rage, purple surprised us as a staple color and no one could deny the abundance of metallics. Accent walls were ever prevalent and antlers made a come back. Did anyone notice that geometry was no longer limited to math homework? Chairs, rugs, pillows and bedding were susceptible to patterns in all shapes sizes and....birds? The new animal print for 2008 wasn't quite so jungle themed. Large bird, branch and leaf prints cropped up late in 2008 and will thankfully last well into 2009. Speaking of 2009, there are predictions as to what lies ahead. Some of our favorite trend forecasts here at Panoply include fresh new color palettes, one of a kind accessories and wallpaper. That's right, wallpaper! Wallpaper is coming back in a big way in 2009. We here at Panoply have been receiving samples by the truckloads of some of the most awe inspiring patterns and colors you could imagine. Once you see our inspiration books you will be saying goodbye to your paint roller and hello to beautifully wallpapered walls. The wallpaper of 2009 is art in itself and the perfect accessory to build a room around. Color for 2009 is going to be bold and visually satisfying. Paint, accessories and art will pop in shades of emerald, sapphire and garnet jewel tones. On the other side of the color spectrum, with a more contemporary feel, colors like soft gray, peacock, purple and yellow are being paired together to create hip sophistication. Don't forget deep brown and black, they can bring balance to any color scheme. In preparation for 2009, just remember that accent walls still work (try one with wallpaper), antlers can be chic, rich color works all over or sparingly, brown is here to stay, and your friends at Panoply Interior Design can make your design dreams come true.

NEW: Artist Studios In-House at Panoply

Those unfamiliar with Panoply Interior Design may not be aware that Flint Gallery is an integral part of our design business. Recently, Panoply invited Craig McMillan and Georgie Dunn, both of Newnan, to set up artist studios on our third floor. Craig is a nationally recognized artist and in addition to his work featured at Panoply's Flint Gallery, he also has commissioned pieces in several venues in Georgia. The Children's wing at Northside Hospital in Atlanta and the Summit 1825 Building in Newnan are two such venues that Craig is featured in, the latter of which features a space designed by Panoply. Georgie Dunn, who also has commissioned pieces at the Summit, is a rising star in the art world. After becoming the U.S. National Women's skydiving champion, Georgie began teaching art at Newnan Crossing Elementary and now works independently of and collaboratively with Craig on various projects.

These two artists bring with them both incredible talent and insightful theory that helps us convey to our customers a well rounded view of art and it's importance in interior spaces and everyday life.

Flint Gallery is currently showing several works by both Craig McMillan and Georgie Dunn, as well as works by more than forty other artists from the southeast. Be sure to check out flintgallery.com for updates.

Panoply Welcomes New Designer

Panoply Interior Design is pleased to announce a new addition to our design team. Recent University of West Georgia graduate Amanda Campbell of Carrollton, Georgia graduated in December with a Bachelor of Fine Arts with a concentration in Interior Design. Amanda won several design competitions while at West Georgia including one for the potential redesign of Carrollton's Sunset Hills Country Club Tennis Pro Shop.

After deciding that real world experience was necessary prior to her graduation, Amanda decided to find a reputable design firm in which to work. She began her work here at Panoply as an intern in August of 2008 and after showing an efficient work ethic and willingness to learn Amanda was extended an offer for a permanent position. Amanda currently holds numerous job titles at Panoply including Interior Designer, Design Assistant, Design Project and Art Gallery Manager,

Administrative Assistant, Graphic Design and Web Design Planner and Marketing Coordinator. Having had the opportunity to attend numerous classes not directly related to interior design at West Georgia affords Amanda the ability and capability in performing all of the afore mentioned responsibilities. Amanda has already begun work on her first interior design project and we look forward to great things from her. She is proving to be an asset to our interior design firm and fine art gallery.
